MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 25.

Station at midnight one night last week all out of breath, and told the station agent that he had been chased by a ghost. "It was tall and white," said he, "and it could run faster than a horse. "Where did you see it first?" asked the station master. "Right in South street, under the bridge, where the train went down. The last Dedham train had gone along and I was getting ready to go home when it hopped up on the bridge, stood there waving its arm a minute, and then came down the bank toward me. It was tall and slim, and had a long white robe on, which looked like a woman's night dress. I thought it was something trying to scare me, as it is a dreaffully lone-some place, and made up my mind to tack e it, but as it came closer to me I saw it wasn't human, because I couldn't hear its feet hit on the step at all, but it moved right along." Kirby is sick abed from his fright. He is a sober, intelligent man and not at all inclined to be superstitious.

It floated down about fifty yards and suddenly stopped and commenced to whirl slowly round and round. Here the old negro dived and secured the body. He claims to have recovered four or five other lost bodies by this means.

nothing more than a fair beginning. On the other hand it is a matter for congratulation that the growth of some evil things may be also promptly frustrated. A large proper also promptly frustrated.
